

Ariel Masetto M.D.
Assistant Professor
Department of Rheumatology
Université de Sherbrooke

Dr. Masetto is an assistant professor at the Department of Rheumatology of the Université de Sherbrooke since 2006, He is very implicated in CME for primary care and he's involved in a lot of teaching activities including lectures, workshops, and clinical fellowships. With the Centre de Formation Continue de l'Université de Sherbrooke, he's in charge of an organisation of a post-graduation program in Musculoskeletal medicine directed to family physicians. As a medical teacher and a regional opinion leader, he strongly believes in the urgent needs of increasing rheumatologic clinical skills of primary care physicians. He's directing his career efforts towards this crucial goal.

He's also interested in scleroderma research and he's an active member of the Canadian Scleroderma Research Group.
