

Ann Clarke

Dr. Ann Clarke is a Professor in the Department of Medicine at the University of Calgary and holds The Arthritis Society Chair.

She is an established investigator in the epidemiology, economics, and outcomes of rheumatic diseases, particularly systemic lupus erythematosus (SLE). Dr. Clarke is Vice Chair of the Systemic Lupus International Collaborating Clinics (SLICC), a group of world-renowned lupus investigators.

She has contributed to the development of standardized measures for lupus disease activity, damage, patient assessment, and outcome analysis.